

Name: Lirta Rousten

Affiliation: Scholar Class, noble, associated with the Shaperite up until the banishment of her family.

Lirta and her mother's research into the lost Rousten thaig led them to theorize the thaig's location, but the deep road access from Orzammar had been sealed off centuries before.

After Lirta's mother was executed by King Bhelan when he took power, and she and her father were banished to the surface, Lirta set out to find another deep road entrance that could take her to Rousten thaig. She found a cave southeast of Jader just where her research predicted.

Lirta and her father used the last of their family funds to purchase the land around the cave, and began excavation. They ran out of coin about the same time their search for a deep roads entrance revealed rich veins of Silverite.

Lirta and her father are Roxa's prisoners in a prison cell in the mine.

Name: Pyrtin Turver

Pyrtin has put all of his efforts into supporting his daughter in reclaiming her Rousten heritage.

Pyrtin tried to find legitimate business partners, willing to invest in a Silverite mine so that his and Lirta's share of the proceeds could go toward continuing to tunnel into the deep roads. But he made the mistake of partnering with the Carta. Roxa took over the mine on behalf of herself and the carta, exclusively running the mining operation using less than legal means to maximize profits.

Pyrtin and his daughter are Roxa's prisoners in a prison cell in the mine.
